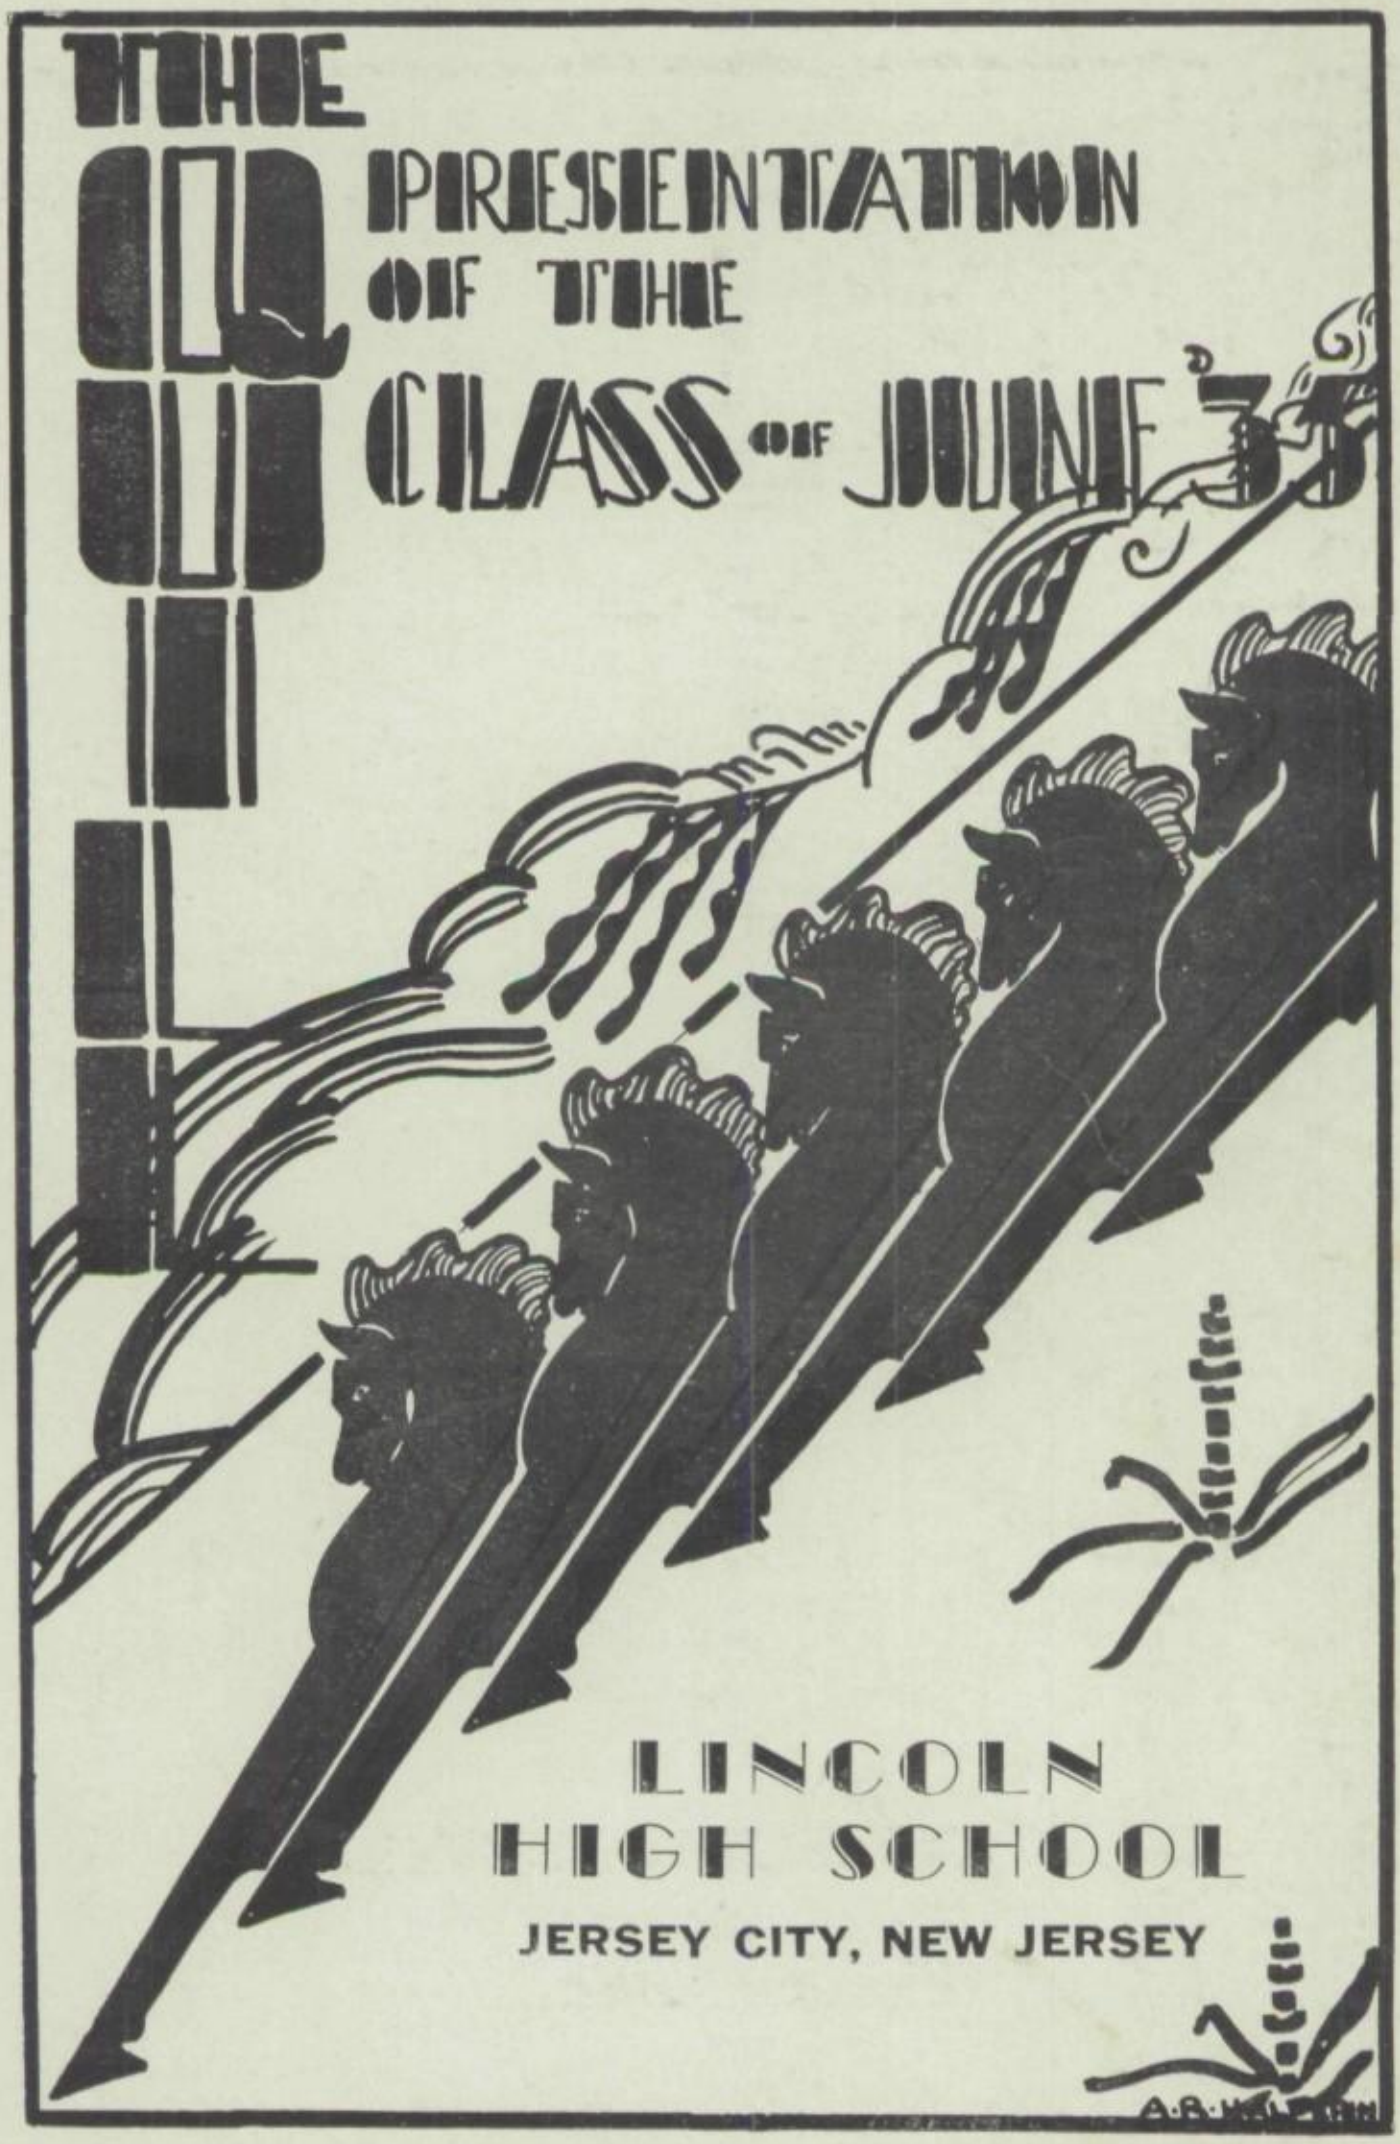
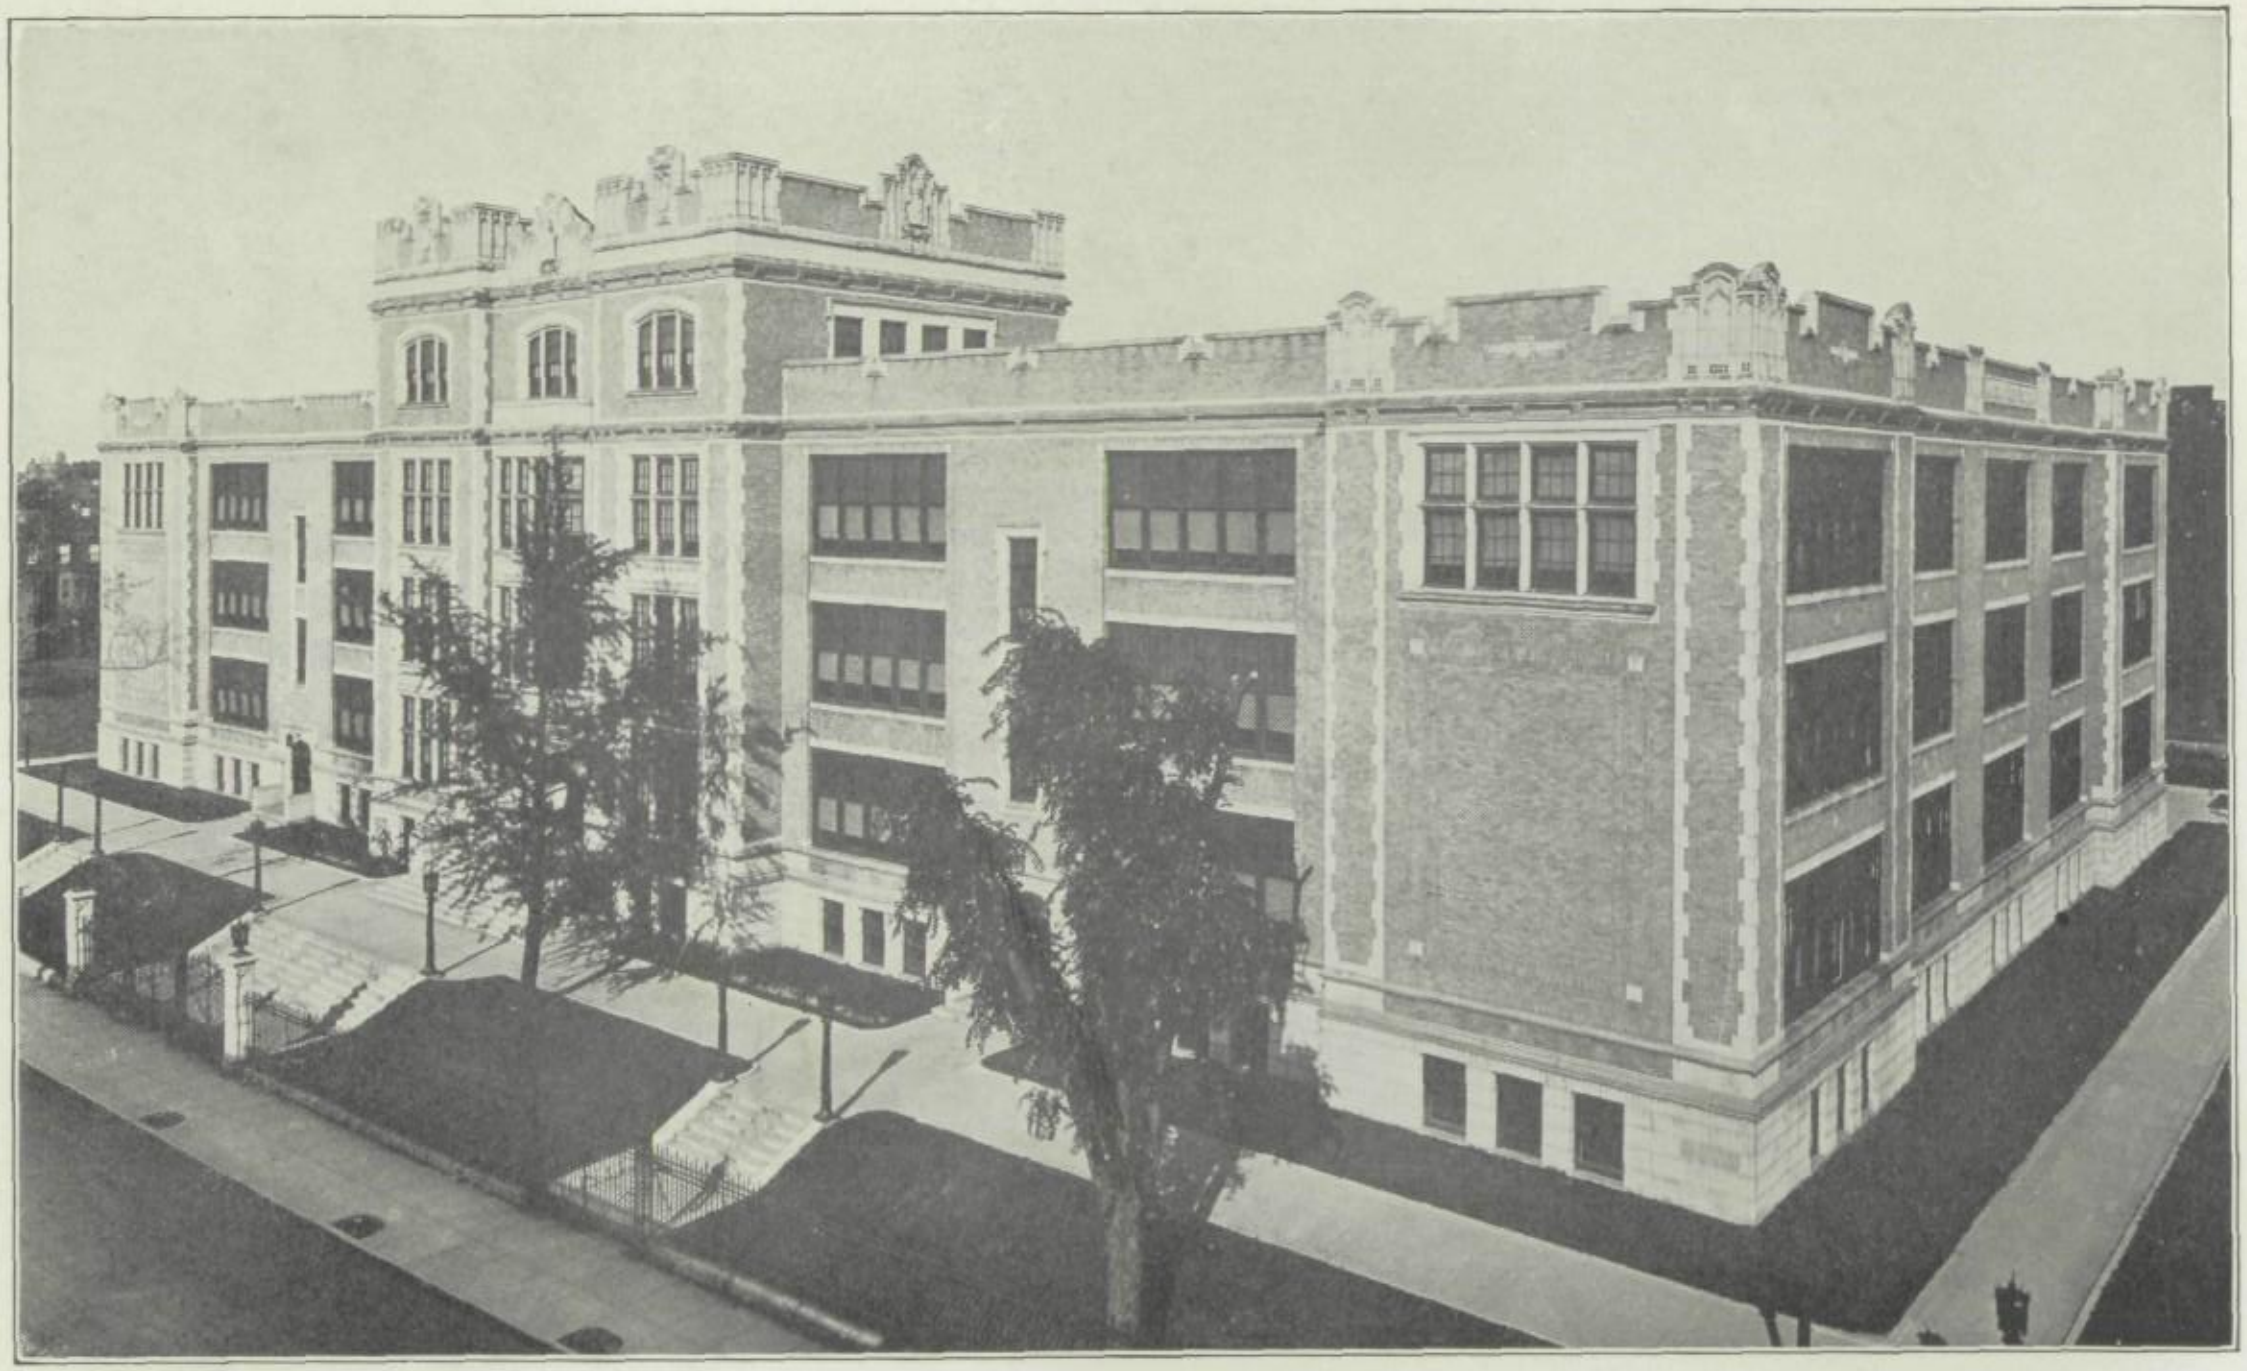
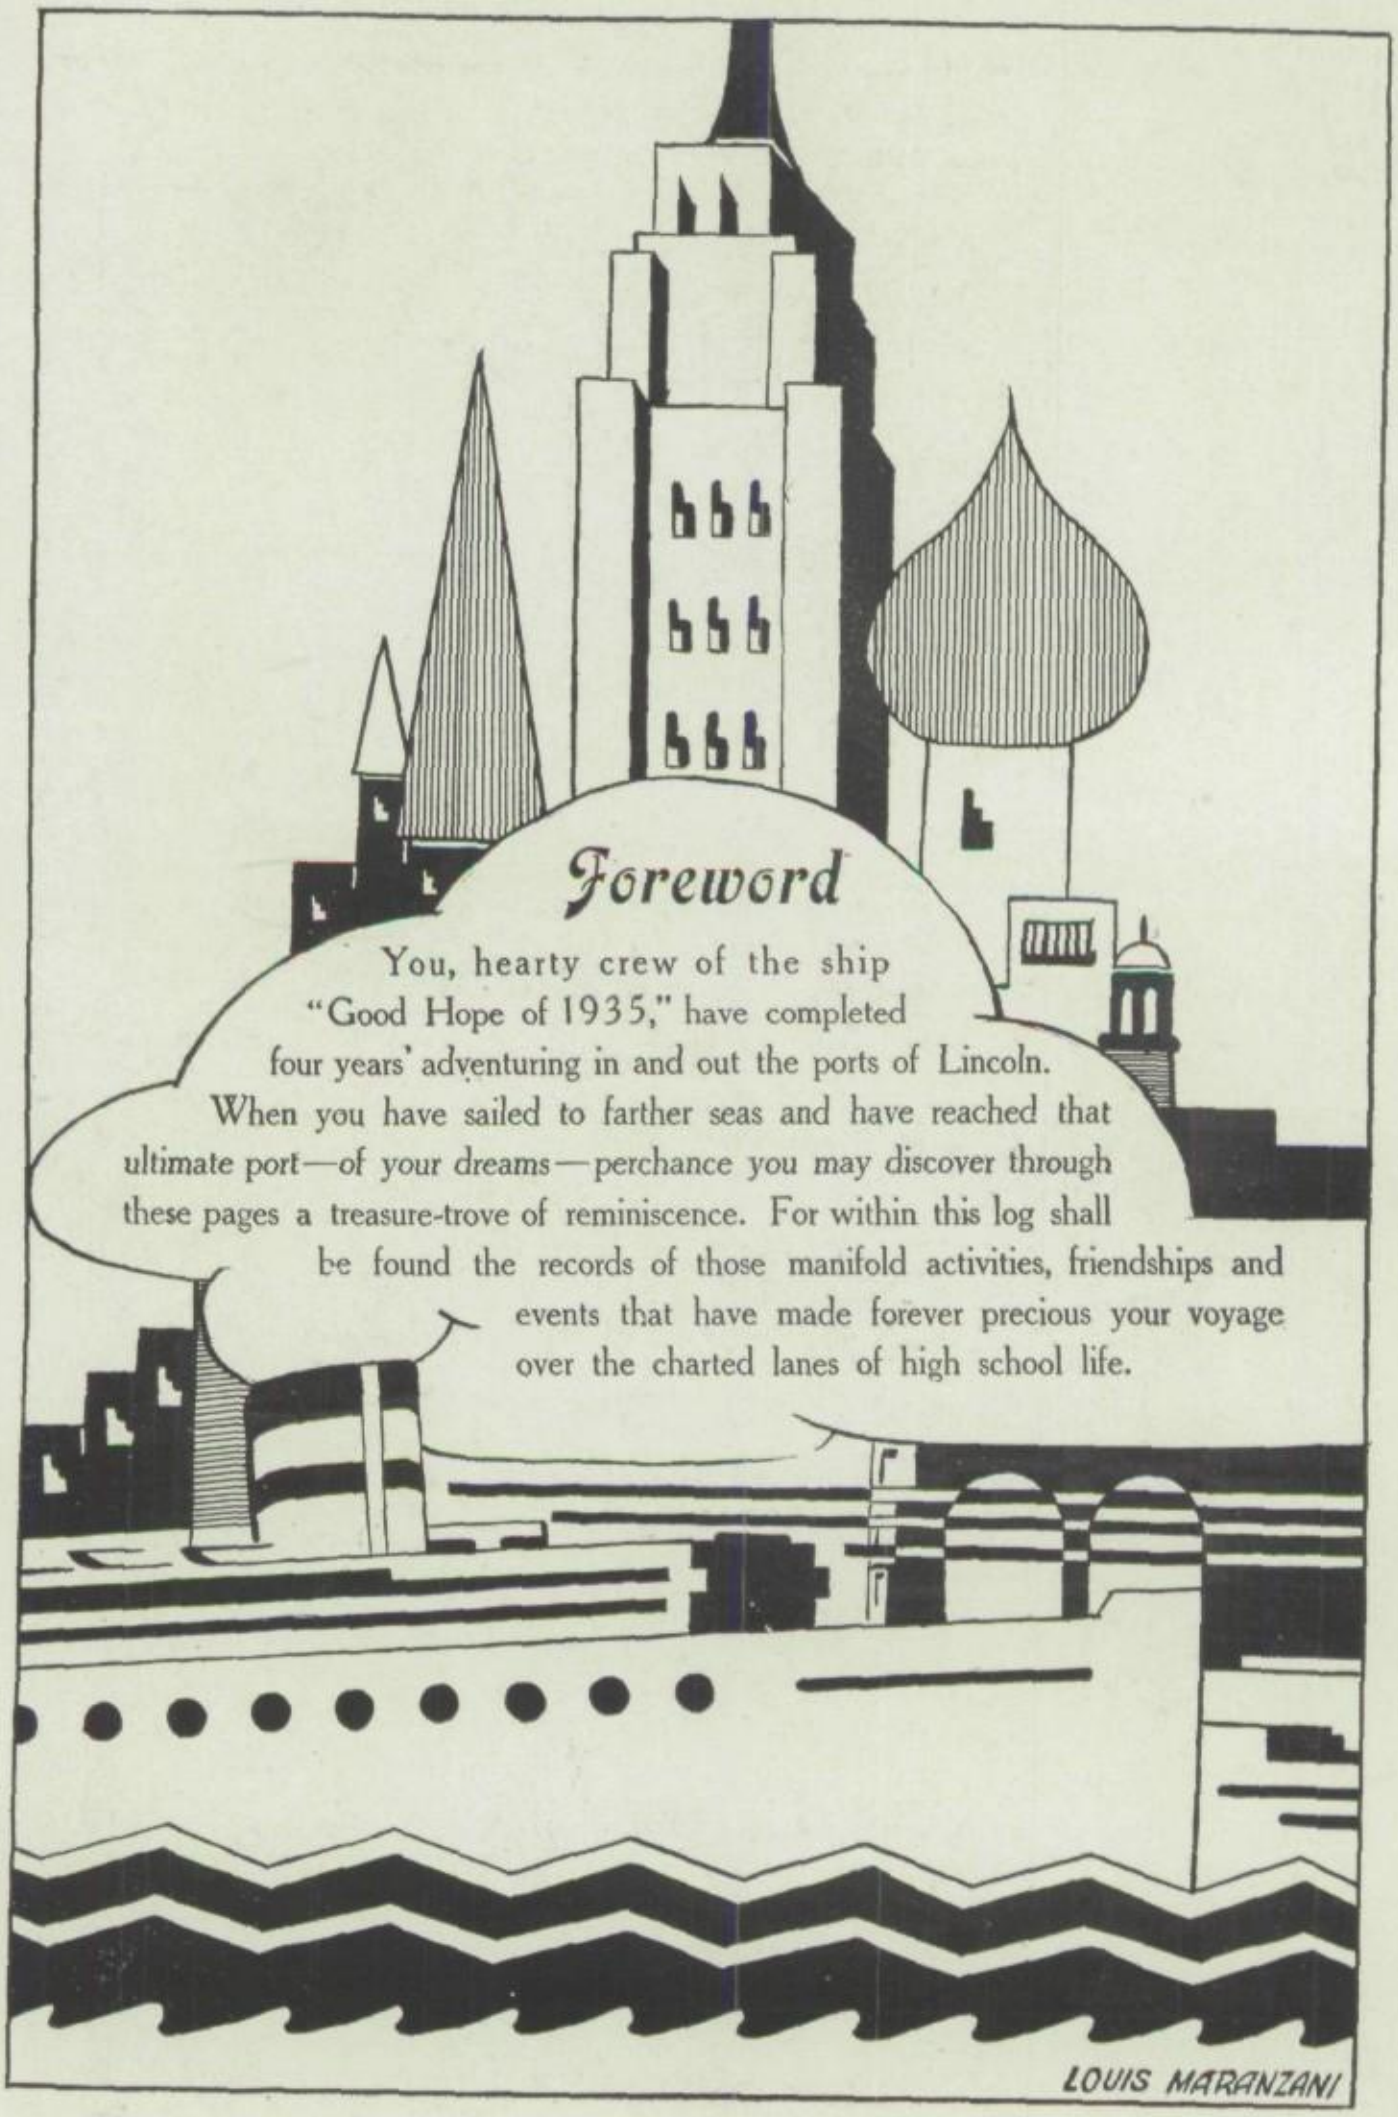
THE QUIPRESENTATION OF THE CLASS OF JUNE '35



LINCOLN
HIGH SCHOOL

JERSEY CITY, NEW JERSEY





Foreword

You, hearty crew of the ship "Good Hope of 1935," have completed four years' adventuring in and out the ports of Lincoln.

When you have sailed to farther seas and have reached that ultimate port—of your dreams—perchance you may discover through these pages a treasure-trove of reminiscence. For within this log shall be found the records of those manifold activities, friendships and events that have made forever precious your voyage over the charted lanes of high school life.

LOUIS MARANZANI

Thomas H. Quigley, A.M.

Principal

From whom, as from a river's source, flowed the clear waters of benevolence and wise advice, rendering young minds fertile for the growth of righteous endeavor.

We, the officers and crew of the ship
"Good Hope of 1935," sincerely dedicate this issue of

"The Quill"

to

Nellie Champaign,

our faithful pilot, who made our cruise through Lincoln High School a smooth and pleasant one, and who followed our course with interest even after resigning her command.

"The Thirteenth Chair"

The class of June, 1935, on May 18th, presented a stirring drama, "The Thirteenth Chair."

Edward Wales is murdered at the home of Roscoe Crosby, in the midst of a seance conducted by Rosalie La Grange, a spiritualistic medium. Since the thirteen persons present at the time were locked in for the seance, it follows that the murderer must have been one of those in the room.

Tim Donohue, the detective, can not find the knife that the murderer used, but all the evidence points to Helen O'Neill, young Crosby's fiancee, and daughter of Rosalie La Grange, as the murderer.

Rosalie, however, accidentally locates the knife, and clears her daughter by frightening the murderer, Philip Mason, into a confession.

FEBRUARY

1. Greetings and salutations are exchanged as old-timers meet. Ye teachers and pupils, both, are decked out in the newest of tans 'n what-not.

4. Freshies and veterans begin to quaver as they see Room 30 listed on their schedules.
   Mr. Arthur Santell is just "that strong" on an assembly program, and gives autograph to Gladys Meyers, who is thrilled to death.

5. Mr. Wright claims he can tear a Webster dictionary in two.

7. Mr. Wright: "Miss Al-Al-Al—Oh, Phyllis!!"
   P. S. It should have been Altshul.

14. Chem. students immediately after making ammonia gas in Mr. Wilson's class ask where they can find some NH^3. (That's ammonia gas!)

15. Miss Johnson tells students to pretend that they are in a torture chamber when taking exams. TORTURE is right!!

20. Class elections cause of great excitement throughout school.

21. Helen Scales: "The essayist, Lamb, wrote "Dissertation on Roast Lamb!"
   P. S. This is going to kill you. It should have been "Dissertation on Roast PIG!"

26. Inga Jorgenson and Elaine Davies make heroines of themselves by capturing (of all things) a MOUSE in the locker room.

27. Miss Johnson, looking at snow six inches in depth on the lawn, claims that SPRING is just around the corner.

28. Mr. Wright: "Write your answers in good, clear English, and above all, DON'T tabulate.
Infante: "May we use LISTS?"

MARCH

5. Isabelle Klopman intends to go to Harvard, according to reports.

8. Miss Koch: "Is a tax like a bill?"
Ann Mayernik: "Oh, no. You have to pay a tax. You don't have to pay a bill."

10. Pupils in Mr. Barget's history class are dumbfounded when he exclaims that he wouldn't go to a burlesque. "Burlesques are only for men who are about to retire."

11. Mr. Wilson: "When you eat jelly, you are eating something like a glue." Oh, Mr. Wilson, why did you say THAT?

14. Miss Koch: "What would you say, Vance, if I called you a scallywag?"
McClear: "I'd say, you're nice, too."

17. Mr. Wright: "Miss Newman, you come into class as if you were happy to see us."
Jennie: "What do you want me to do? Turn a handspring?"

27. Miss Kennedy: "History is handed down to us from hand to mouth."
Bright student: "Oh, how unsanitary."

APRIL

3. Miss Barker: "Who were some of the famous people of Johnson's time?"
Sam Butcher: "JOHNSON."

5. "What kind of windows have they in France?" was the question asked by Miss Johnson.
Pupil's answer: "FRENCH windows."

7. Hadder and Raymond try to teach each other the manly art of self-defense. Hadder only got a bruised arm, and a split lip.

8. Miss Capron (looking enviously at McCabe's head): "Why are some people blessed with perfect hair?"

11. Miss Barker: "What is 'Fuzzy Wuzzy' by Kipling about?"
Elon Nobles: "A caterpillar."

14. Miss Wayman, in the biology class, has the "strong" boys concentrate on opening a jar of pickled grasshoppers. Much to the girls' relief, it took nearly the whole period to open it.

17. Lil Bregman causes quite a commotion by tossing a match into the sink, after she had put carbon disulphide in said place. Hot stuff!!

18. Girls parade as boys in play on assembly program. Boy, oh Boy!

19. Mr. Wilson: "Sulphur is found in what state?"
Knoeller: "Native state."

21. Miss Barker: "What was the result of Johnson's marriage?"
Bright student: "His wife died."

29. Gatoff: "A carcass is a body."
Sub (pointing to Stamberg): "Is that a carcass?"

31. Beatrice Berzon (translating in Spanish class): "He nailed his eyes into the ceiling."

2. Newman (translating incorrectly in French): "It is false," the president said.
Miss Johnson: "'We are lost,' the captain shouted!"

3. Mr. Wright: "The picture of Lincoln on the Leader this week looks like Cliff Baumgardner with his new haircut."

4. The Prom. Enough said.

6. Mr. Quigley announces establishment by faculty of W. F. Enteman prize in mathematics.

7. Fitzi: "Gade said babies could romp near the athletic field. How does he know?"
Voice: "He romps there."

8. Fitzi (translating French): He was van-van-van—victor.

9. Miss Ware: "Count off by twos."
Janet Nevins: "One."
Helen Lowery (very seriously): "Four."

13. Eighteen-minute periods today! Hoo-rah!

14. Heard in locker room:
"Did you take the Ivory Door home?"
Tsk! Tsk! Imagine ivory doors in Lincoln.

15. Lincoln goes on the air in "Lincoln Radio Program."

16. Lincoln Baseball Team defeats St. Michael's, completing eight straight victories thus far.

— LOG —

The Sea of Education has many moods. Its whirling winds and churly waters discourage and weaken some; but in others, these very obstacles arouse a fighting spirit, the will to stay on top—confident that beyond the stormy waters lies the shore.

After every storm comes peace and sunshine, the waves dance, the blue waters smile. When at last the shore is reached, the voyager can say, "It was a pleasant trip, too soon ended."

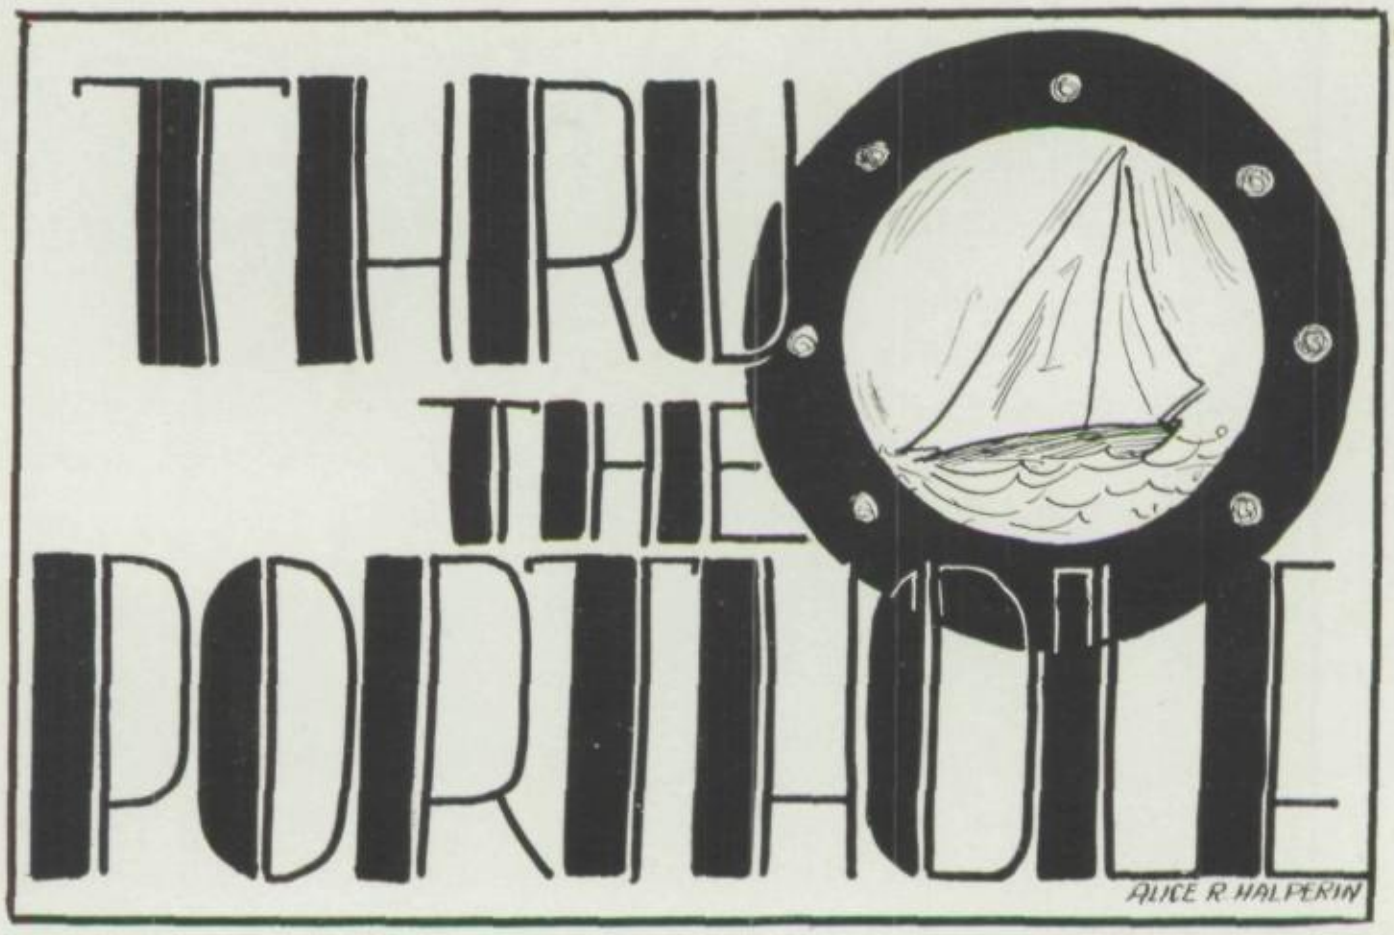
In such an optimistic mood the "S. S. Good Hope of 1935" set sail in September, 1931. What their voyage would bring, its passengers did not know. Inexperienced all, they looked with timorous, but hopeful, eyes upon the waters stretched before them. They saw about them other crafts, and were particularly awed by "S. S. Success of 1932," the most important ship afloat at the time.

After two years of apprenticeship they were permitted to choose leaders from among their own members. Eric Weiss was placed at the helm with Sophie Carlson as First Mate, Edward Shutt, Second Mate, and Helen Fitzgibbons, Purser. To Inga Jorgensen was entrusted the task of keeping the log of the memorable voyage. To map the course of the vessel, Mrs. Harstine was selected. With expert care and sagacious judgment she fulfilled her office until duty called her elsewhere. To take her place Miss Champaign was selected, a navigator of willing service and tireless effort. Once more Eric Weis took the helm, assisted this time by First Mate, Akin Toffee, and again by Second Mate, Edward Schutt, and Purser, Helen Fitzgibbons. The vessel now drew attention to itself by the skillful presentation of "The Smell of Powder" by two casts.

As the goal drew nearer, the fight became harder; greater difficulties arose, yet more pleasures. Once more the navigating officer was changed. Miss Walsh, competent and experienced, took up the work, and Edward Schutt captained our craft, with Lillian Sherry and Elaine Davies as First and Second Mates, respectively, and again with Helen Fitzgibbons as Purser.

The last days at sea are always eventful, and the passengers and crew have planned important activities: a mystery drama, a dance, an Exit Day revue, and as an enduring memorial of their voyage, "The Quill."

Yes, the sea may have been rough at times and some of us may have been lost beneath those turbulent waves, but for most of us, "the ship has weathered every rock, the prize we sought is won," and on June 26th we reach the shore where we may christen our ship "S. S. Success of 1935."



A. M. UNDERGRADUATE LOG

MARCH

25. While watching the prestidigitator put George Palmer through a series of antics, at the morning assembly, Thomas Jaeger prepares a set of questions to ask the magician, in order to learn the truth of this "master-mind" work.

26. Gertrude Goeltz was in the lunchroom as "per usual" today, but she was minus her knitting. Significance: The football huskies have nothing to gaze at.

27. Sylvia Grozanski is seen in a tearful mood because a printer was unable to issue the "printed" Leader today.

28. Jack McLoughlin is seen having a difficult (and embarrassing time) in evicting a dog found to be hanging around Room 25.

APRIL

1. April Fool gags are scarce. Miss Capron catches Joseph Bilotta sucking his thumb during the explanation of an important example.

2. Arthur "Red" Devlin is cultivating a "curlier than ever" head of hair. He has heard that Miss Capron admires curly hair.

3. William O'Toole wore "snow-white" shoes to school today, the first seen this year. Raymond Laterman and Frederick Kloes enthusiastically seek to change "snow-white" to "black snow." (Not a new shade by any means).

8. Joseph Zacony is seen sitting on the floor of the second-floor corridor, changing from sneakers to shoes, since the teacher would not permit the change in her room.

9. When discussing the possibilities of another war, Miss Jackson, of the Economics Department, asks Samuel Fanuzzi whether or not he would go to war. "Sure," replies Sam, "I like to travel."

10. Note from the office indicates Edward Schutt wanted there immediately. Says Mr. Barget: "Better 'scuttle' along."

11. Dorothy Cassidy and Barbara Mailler upon this rainy day, made good use of an umbrella in their possession, until Chester Garrison and Jack McLoughlin upon meeting the girls, pushed them out from under.

16. William Kelly, upon being spoken to, makes known his grudge against the swiming-team authorities. "We want suits," says William.

18. Frank Conway was seen taking it easy today. Ditto for yesterday, and the day before, and the day before that, and so on ad infinitum.

29. Thomas "Tommy" Eagen won a dance contest last week, his partner being Eugenia Caroselli. Lillian Sherry was one of the judges.

30. Frank "Nittie" has been hitting a good "20" in his typing class and that's going some, to say nothing of Marian Rolphs, who hovers about the "55 to 60" mark.

MAY

2. Janet Shapiro is highly excited over the 11B rings.

3. Lincoln Leader headline says, "Mr. Connolly Plagued by Mental Laziness." "Humph," retorts Adele Cole, "he's not the only one."

6. It was raining cats and dogs when the 12:30 bell rang today. Unfortunately, the Zeller equipage was not in waiting. Result: Certain boys got wet.

8. Earl Gallaudet's day of days! He has finished reporting.

9. In Physics Class:
Mr. Draper: "This wheel has thirty revolutions a minute."
Joe Cipolla: "Thought that happened only in the Balkan States."

10. Phyllis Weinberg is of the opinion that lots of girls use dumbbells to get color in their cheeks, while Elizabeth Rajala is of the belief that a lot of girls use color in their cheeks to seem dumbbells.

P. M. LOG

FEBRUARY

1. The newly pledged 9B's have become very "uppish" for they are now educated freshies and are not looked down upon.

2. The Bucknell Glee Club so delights the pupils that Mr. Quigley turns cheerleader and leads in three rahs for Bucknell.

5. Mr. Charles Fitzpatrick, reaching for the red ink, "Now, who didn't see the radio show?"

6. Swimming is added to the schedule.

7. It being Boy Scout Week, many of our friends appear in uniform.

11. A portion of the Great Emancipator's life is enacted by the P. M. Citamard Guild.

12. Lincoln once more frees the slaves (from school).

14. Miss Bossidy: "Lynch, you're the most Irish Spaniard that I have."

15. Is that an engagement ring that Ann Dress is wearing?

18. Alas! the pupils are sadly disillusioned, when a speaker tells them that the story about George Washington's cherry tree is mythical. Garrison claims his heart is broken because he was using Washington for a model and hadn't told a lie for five years.

20. Miss Kavanagh: "Did anyone see David Copperfield?"
Dorecki: "He's absent today."

21. The students agree to forgive Washington since he gives them a holiday tomorrow.

25. McNamara and Ginty go out for the gym team; but after watching some of the state champs, "Mac" decides that he is a good baseball player.

28. Loffeler becomes air-minded and joins the Jimmy Allen Flying Club. His balloon is punctured, however, when Miss Wells tells him to come down to earth and stop dreaming.

MARCH

1. Weizoreck, much to his sorrow, renews acquaintances with Miss Manger.

4. The P. M. school is asked to furnish material for the track team.

5. The P. M. school answers Coach Mitchell by sending twenty-five boys out for track.

7. Plans are discussed for an intramural track meet.

8. Sinnott puts a big "L. H. S." in the snow on the lawn, but a hot sun melts the snow before his efforts can be appreciated.

12. History Teacher: "Name some of the better tyrants."

15. Korecki stays home, giving the teachers a rest.

18. Pupils are wondering why the samples of handwriting are wanted.

19. Mr. Isaacs: "Maybe you would like to write something about me?" Nagy (playfully): "Yes, but you wouldn't like it."

21. Ah, spring! When a young man's fancy turns to the baseball diamond.

22. Lynch is just about to sign Ginty for the "Quill" when the bell rings, spoiling a sale.

26. "Windy Willie" Beck almost breaks a leg trying to get some of the ice cream handed out by the magician.

28. Who nearly drove Mr. C. Fitzpatrick crazy asking questions at the baseball meeting?

APRIL

1. The faculty is greatly amused by the performance of the children from the Normal School. The broadest grins were displayed by Mr. H. Fitzpatrick, Mr. Connolly, Miss Manger, Mr. Benway, and Mr. Slane. It turns out that Mr. Fitzpatrick had a good reason for smiling, for his son was one of the main characters.

3. Jannuzzi is informed by Miss Wells that he has to buy the "Quill" as long as his picture is going to be in it.

4. Miss Lynch: "You know, they held open air meetings, and they squatted on the ground."
Sanbom: "What did they do when it rained?"
Voice: "Let it rain."

5. Sinnott is dreaming, but comes to earth with a crash when his chair slips from beneath him.

8. Mrs. Skiffington gives the study class a solo on the "Manly Art of Self-Defense."

30. Another month gone. We're just nearing the final home-stretch.

MAY

1. Miss Smith: "Fifteen years ago I was in the pen. Oh—er—I was a visitor there."

2. Miss Hallahan gives the students a pleasant surprise in the form of a test.

6. There surely must have been a ghost prowling around the stage when the Seniors put on those scenes from the "Thirteenth Chair," for the lights went out when the actor who was supposed to have put them out was at least ten feet from the switch.

9. Mr. Benway (although he doesn't know it) saved me from an English test by sending for me.

10. Since the club pictures have been taken for the "Quill," the sales for the year book have strangely increased.

24. Baseball "Pep" meeting is held in the Auditorium, where Mr. Quigley incidentally announced a holiday on Friday following Memorial Day.

Ideals

We are told by Stevenson that "To be truly happy is a question of how we begin and not of how we end, of what we want and not of what we have." It would seem that we have to have an ideal in order to succeed to the best of our ability.

Idealism is the quest of perfection. Being mortals, we cannot, of course, attain perfection in any field; but the desire and effort to attain perfection are spiritual foods without which we cannot live happily. The body needs food to replace and strengthen its parts; the spirit needs interests, ideals, to keep alive.

He who attains his ideal, he who is completely satisfied with his work, is doomed. It is said that when a great Danish sculptor unveiled his masterpiece, he was seen to weep. His friends, who had come to praise and congratulate him, were surprised to hear him say: "My genius is decaying." When asked for an explanation of this strange remark, he replied: "This statue is the first of my works that I have ever felt completely satisfied with. Till now my ideal has always been far beyond what I could execute, but it is so no longer. I can never create a great work of art again." This man realized that he was not able to climb higher, for he could not imagine a height beyond that which he had attained.

Let us think of the scientist as an idealist, as an example of a man whose vision is always growing. Michael Pupin said: "The worship of the eternal truth and the burning desire to seek an ever-broadening revelation of it constitute the mental attitude which I call 'idealism in science'." Thus, we see that the aspiration of the scientist is to interpret and understand the ideal works of the Divine. Everywhere the scientist looks he can observe those mysterious manifestations. At dawn, the sunrise, heralded by long white streamers spreading in the eastern sky, he feels to be the Divine command, "Let there be light." Everywhere he encounters sound, which, with light, he associates with the Divine operation by means of which man communicates with his Creator. How can there be any higher ideal than the infinite desire for understanding, which is closely linked with the relationship between man and his Creator.

Ideals make one spiritually rich. They keep before us visions of goals which are a little beyond attainment. If a man catches up with his ideal, he cannot imagine anything further for which he can work, and so must stand still or descend.

> "Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,
> Or what's a heaven for?"

What Now?

On or about the thirtieth of June, a large number of seventeen and eighteen-year-olds are going to be ejected from schools all over the country with rolls of paper in their hands which will certify that they have received an education. We of the class of June, 1935, will be of this number. Some of us will spend four years in what pass for institutions of higher education, but at the end of that time we still shall be faced with the question, "What now?"

We shall be entering a world which apparently has no use for us, a world which can not or will not make use of even experienced people, a world in which even now those students who have gone before are unsuccessfully looking for jobs. What chance have we to get work, to support ourselves?

In this country one-sixth of the population are in part or in whole on relief. There aren't enough jobs to go around, and what jobs there are are only for those who have had experience. Statesmen and politicians are running hither and thither like decapitated fowl. Bankers walk around in a jittery daze. The whole system's crazy, but nobody wants to change it. The only hope for us young people to get anywhere seems to be to rear up on our hind legs, rip open the existing system, see what makes it act so queerly, and fix the "blasted" thing.

It may not be necessary to scrap the present system, it may not indeed be necessary to change the system to the degree that our radical friends wish; but something must be done, and it seems that the only ones willing or able to do it are the youngsters with the chalk-dust still under their finger-nails. And that means us.

We must find out why people can starve and freeze in the same country that ploughs under its corn and cotton. We shall have to discover how a group of men can get so much power that they can plunge a country into war just so that they can sell their steel and powder. We shall have to find out why competent men who want to work have to go on relief rolls. We must determine the why, the where, the who of graft. We shall have to know the whys of all the other peculiar things in this country.

Then, after we've found out all about these things, it's up to us to "fix the works." We'll have a harder time correcting the abuses. It'll be a tough job. We'll have some setbacks before we're through. It won't be a job for softies or loafers; but it's a job that has to be done and done soon, or the jig's up for the whole system.

America depends on us!

The Letter

Mrs. Johnson flashed me a friendly smile as she opened the door.

"Hello, Mrs. Johnson," I said. "Is Ed at home?"

"Why, yes, Frank. He's down in the cellar puttering around his shop as usual. Go on down."

"Thanks," I replied; and I went down the ramshackle cellar stairs of the young machinist's home.

Ed, at the lathe-bench of his hard-earned cellar workshop, looked up with a cheery "Hello," and then resumed his work. As he set the lathe, he began to talk enthusiastically.

"Say, Frank, have you seen that new kind of carburetor that they have in the 'Popular Mechanics' this month?"

"Sure, what about it?" I replied.

"Well, nothing much; only it gave me an idea that I've since worked out. Take a look at these plans." He held out the blue-prints for me to see, his blue eyes twinkling under his rather bushy brows.

"Well, what do you think of that for a new kind of gas feeder?" he qusetioned me, after I had looked over the blue-prints for a moment or two.

I was amazed by what I saw on those sheets of paper.

"Why, it's great!" I told him. "You're a made man if you can patent that." But a moment later all my enthusiasm deserted me as I saw the twinkle go out of my friend's eyes and give way to a wistful frown.

"Fat chance of my doing any patenting, and you know it. Me, a twenty-dollar-a-week machinist. Why, it'd take me fifty years to get enough money."

"What do you mean, Ed? You can borrow some money on the house, can't you? I haven't a thin dime or I'd back you in a flash. All you need is five hundred dollars, and you can borrow that at the bank."

"Say, listen,"—he fairly jumped on me. "Have you ever tried to get money out of that old chisel-face down at the bank? You might as well try to chew nails as try to get money from the great Phelpsville National Bank."

"Well, that isn't the only place, is it?" I asked him. "There are plenty of other sources from which you could get capital."

He seemed for a few moments to be sunk in reflection. "I think I'll try it," he cried suddenly, and then he jumped to his feet. "But say, let's go upstairs and have a little game of checkers. I feel in a winning mood."

I was somewhat taken back by this change in my friend; but since I was glad to see him cheerful again, I said no more about it. "Yeah," I said jokingly, "that's what you thought the last time." I started up the stairs, with Ed trailing me.

* * * * * * * *

Since I was very busy at my own job, it was quite a few days before I saw him again; but in the meantime I began to hear things about him. It seems that he had taken up my suggestion of looking for backing. Almost everywhere I went in the little town, I heard of his trips to banks, to rich people, and to every other place where there was even the scantest hope of getting money. Finally I heard that his quest had been rewarded in the form of a mortgage on his house.

On the very evening of the day on which I learned this news, I went to his house and received affirmation of the rumor. I found him working on the plans and the necessary working model. As I went down into the old cellar, he bounded toward me to tell me the good news.

"I got it! I got it!" he exclaimed. "The Robertstown National Bank gave me a mortgage, and look"—he led me over to his bench, where there was the usual litter of tools and materials—"I've almost got the model finished. The plans are all drawn up, and I'm sending in my application to the patent lawyers in the morning."

I was as excited as he was, looking over everything to see if all were in first-rate condition. I found a few minor errors, which he easily corrected. We worked like demons, so that by twelve o'clock everything was packed and ready to go into the mail.

* * * * * * * *

After that night came a long period of watchful and anxious waiting. Every evening on his arrival home from work, the first thing that Ed did was to ask if "the letter" had come from Washington. I was as eager as he. Every evening I would gulp down my dinner as if my life would end if I did not get over to his house before seven o'clock to see whether that message of success had come.

For three months this went on and Ed, his family, and I lived like lunatics. Finally, one Wednesday night after he opened the door to my knock, I found the answer in his face.

"No good, eh?"—I wanted to be certain.

"No," he sighed, "no good."

"Where's the letter?"

"Over there on the table." Poor Ed almost sobbed as he slumped into a chair, apparently without enough strength to get me the letter. I picked it up and read:

'Dear Sir:

After carefully searching the records of the United States Patent Office, we find that this type of carbureter has already been patented by the Phillips Carbureter Company of Columbus, Ohio.

We regret. . . . .'

That was all I had the heart to read. Full well I knew what that letter meant to Ed and his far from well-to-do family. It meant months, indeed years, of hard work and pinching economy to buy back their modest home.

I looked at Ed sitting in his old armchair with his head in his hands, the picture of misery. I did not try to cheer him, for I knew that the effort would be wasted.

Our reverie was interrupted by the voice of Mrs. Johnson, from the kitchen.

"Ed, what was in that other letter you got?"

"The other letter?" asked Ed. "Oh, yes!—I guess I didn't open it. Here, look at it yourself.—Most likely some ad.—What does it say on the outside?—Oh, yes, The Phillips Carbure—Say! Wait a minute."

There followed a ripping and crackling noise, as the letter was quickly opened, and then silence as a look of astonishment crept into my friend's face.

"What th—Well I'll be—"

"What is it?" I questioned him in my anxious curiosity.

"Here," he shouted as he shoved the missive under my nose. With this motion he began to jump and dance around the room, singing at the top of his lungs. He went over to his wife and forcibly included her in his wild dance, while she protested loudly, demanding to know what was in the letter the while I peered at the source of all this commotion. The letter read:

'Dear Sir:

We have been notified of your attempt to patent a carbureter employing three-jet construction. No doubt you have been informed that we have already secured this patent.

'We have also seen your model and noted its fine points. It shows excellent workmanship and a perfect sense of design.

'As our company is on the lookout for some new talent to fill some vacancies, we have been authorized by the board of directors to offer you a position in our laboratories at a salary of seventy-five dollars a week, effective immediately.

Hoping for a quick reply to our offer, we are

Yours truly,

THE PHILLIPS CARBURETER COMPANY.'

Revolt

Through the gathering gloom we crept, a band of hard, lean, vengeful men. Up toward a tall pile of grey stone, toward where the chateau of our lord reared its grim visage; long-hidden muskets and swords, improvised pikes, pitchforks, and knives gripped in our horny hands, more used to the plough and spade.

Swiftly a thin line of men was thrown around the castle. Swiftly the huge iron-bound door swung wide, opened from within by our servant comrades. Swiftly but silently we mounted the stairs to his lordship's chamber.

There he sat, as we reached the room, pondering, we thought, upon further ways of squeezing us. I was the first to enter. On hearing my footfall he turned, an oath on his lips, his hand on his sword. My flint-lock roared.

We rifled his strong boxes, consigning to the fire those papers that made us slaves, confiscating his riches. Below we could hear the sounds of other looting. Then, piling straw and tar in every room, we fired the building and fled.

Black, oily smoke poured forth; tongues of flame licked from every crevice. With a great shower of sparks and a deep roar the floors collapsed. At length the roof caved in, and the last walls crumbled.

So perished the chateau and its race.

Wind and Tide

The north wind blows upon the waves,
  And whips them into foaming towers;
The pounding surf upon the shore
  Rears and falls, to mock man's powers.

The tide transforms the line of coast
  From spreading beaches, wide and white,
To narrow strips of sullen gray
  Where sea-birds hover, loath to 'light.

It Happened One Night

One WINTER'S day in LONDON, DURAN a RAYNE, the KING was ABEL to hide from his NOBLES, disguise himself as a TAYLOR, and enter a BARR in order to observe his subjects. The place was patronized by both GOODMAN and GROSSMAN. He found a KOPPEL of old menus to REID, and then asked a waiter, "Give me a COLE BOTTLER SHERRY." Then he secluded himself in a hidden corner of the room.

Suddenly a PORTER entered. Addressing a MILLER, he said, "MABRY you have the PRICE of one of the FEINSTEINS of ale sold here?"

But the MILLER, instead of answering, rudely turned to a husky FISCHER, BROWN from labor under a blistering sun on hot seas, and said, "Great SCOTT, I CANTWELL see how this man HASS such nerve!"

"WELLEN, you're WRIGHT," was the answer.

The PORTER ROSE in great FUREY. He was MADDE'N a tiger. "Think you're WEISS, don't you?" he asked.

"Aw, go slip on an ORENGE PEEL," interrupted the FISCHER, AKIN for a fight.

The PORTER started to TURNER around, divesting himself of his RAYNE-coat. And then the CANNON exploded.

NEVIN-Seven thousand years was there such a battle. The RUEBE and the tough PORTER fought desperately. The SCALES were even. Even a BUTCHER never saw so much blood. The PORTER led with a WRIGHT to his opponent's TEMPLE, who dodged with a LIGHTFOOT so that his aggressor hit empty air.

The gentle KING, in his secluded corner, was horrified. He told a SINGER, who before the fight had been singing CARROLS, to call a KOPF. He started to TURNER way towards the HALL, but a KOZAC interrupted, and would not permit him to go.

The men were in an awful CLINCH(y) when suddenly the BARR-tender yelled, "PULL(e) way!"

That must have been an official password or signal, for the men stopped at once. They were an awful sight, being almost BAER. Some waiters, busy as BEAVERS, started to clear the floor, everything exSCHEPT the floor being by this time peaceful and orderly.

The puzzled KING turned to a BAKER, "To be FRANK with you," he said, "I C(l)ANCY how to deSEIFER this. These men don't seem to know the difference between REIKEN wrong."

"You don't understand," he was told. "They HADDER do that. They made a BUCK for doing that!"

The NOBLE ruler went home with a larger fund of understanding than he had ever acquired before in so short a time.

The Job

Charles Moore was a squealer. We told him what he'd get if he said anything about the Warner job, and then he went and spilled the whole thing to the cops. They sent Tony and Joe up the river for it. The Boss told me to get Charley; so I arranged the job.

It was going to be a nice clean job. Toots hired the apartment at Forty-second and Seventh. Toots used to be sweet on this Moore guy. She'd been all set to marry him; but just before he squealed, she saw him out with another dame. That broke 'em up nice. When she heard that he'd turned pigeon, she wanted to handle the killing herself. We calmed her down, and showed her how she could fix him if she worked with us. She would have done anything to get back at him.

I moved into the apartment Toots had hired, with my duds and a neat little Springfield 30-30. That rifle was a honey. It weighed just seventeen pounds, and was guaranteed to shoot a one-inch "group" at a hundred yards. With telescope sights and a muzzle rest I could hit a nickel with every shot, at seventy-five yards. I learned to do that in France, 1918.

This was the layout. I was to be up in my room, with the window open. I'd sit back from the window so they couldn't see me from the street, but I could cover Seventh Avenue to the south. I had a Maxim silencer on the 30-30. It spoiled the accuracy a little, but not enough to matter.

We figured out a spot on Seventh Avenue that was just seventy-five yards from my window. We had a guy in the outfit who could work a transit. Then we spotted a rickety old car, with a knock like the crack of doom, next to the place to cover the sound of the shot. I put Lefty in it. The bulls didn't know him, and he had a nice innocent face.

Toots was to make up with Charley, and then bring him down Seventh to the spot. Lefty had to start the car just before Moore got there. Then it was up to me. The whole job was a natural.

It took Toots five minutes to make Charley think that everything was O. K. again. After that she had him ready to do anything for her. Then she phoned me. I worked out a time schedule for Toots, and then we got going.

Five minutes before Toots was to arrive I put a high-speed, steel-jacketed cartridge in my Springfield. I only loaded with one, because a full clip unbalances a rifle. I had a dandy telescope-sight on the rifle, and I picked out Toots and Charley about two blocks away. They were talking slowly, and I could see that they were arguing about something.

Lefty started his motor at the right time. I could just about hear it. I took off the safety, and set the sights right on the white handkerchief Charley had in his upper left coat-pocket. I wrapped my finger around the trigger.

Charley stopped suddenly. I was following through on him, and his stop threw my sights off. I brought them up carefully, took a little breath, —and then Toots seemed to faint right into Charley's arms. I could see through the telescope-sights that her lips were moving. She was telling him something.

He threw a quick look up toward me; and then, half carrying her, he ducked into a doorway. They got clean away.

We never found them. We didn't try hard. I could, of course, have had them both as he caught her, but,—well, I liked Toots.

Eric Weiss.

Rain

A solitary figure stood bitterly gazing up at the early morning sun. Suddenly he lowered his eyes and pensively scanned the surrounding country. As he looked, he saw his land . . . dry, barren land that once was moist, breathing soil. The sun had done this . . . the sun that looked so friendly, that men loved for its warm heart. . . . It was cold, this sun. . . . It was greedy . . . cruel.

God, why could it never stop shining . . . for a day . . . for a few hours? The past six months it had been emitting torrid rays that burnt his crops, dried his creek, and ruined his hopes. He couldn't ask Mary to marry him now . . . he had nothing but this arid land. That was not enough to offer.

His childhood aversion, rain, was now his god. Rain, the soft patter of a shower or the violence of a storm . . . what did it matter as long as his thirsty land was given a drink?

The sun was slowly stealing away his life along with that of his soil. At first he had resisted . . . but what was the use of continuing to exist? It would take years before the farm would yield a good harvest. In the meantime what could he do? Ask the government for aid? . . . No, he had his pride. Before stooping to that, he would rather die.

Death? . . . Suicide? . . . That was cowardly. But then, what difference? The sun was a coward too, in fighting against him, for he had no chance to hit back. . . . He could only stand helpless, and watch while the sun destroyed.

He would not surrender to that inaccessible ball of fire. . . . He would not suffer the torture another day.

What of Mary? . . . Would she understand? . . . She was young, she would soon forget. He would write a farewell note, then he would put an end to his misery and suffering.

With a dragging step, the farmer crossed the fields to the ramshackle house. Even this gave evidence of the sun's ruthlessness: the paint that once was fresh and smooth was dulled into blistered ugliness. As he mounted the stairs, he noticed that they too were in need of repair. . . . What was the use? Soon nothing would matter any more.

Well, the note was written. . . . It didn't say much, except that he was sorry and hoped that she would realize that it was the only course open to him. There was no mention of his love . . . no, he wanted her to forget his love, just as the heavens had forgotten the earth's need for rain.

He put the note under the mat where Mary usually found the key when she came each day to cook his lunch. Leaving for the last time the house that had sheltered him for twenty years, he felt his pocket for the revolver.

The sun, as it rode high in the sky, seemed gloating over the damage it had done. It was proclaiming itself the master of the universe, whose rule none could dispute. . . . It was the giver of life, and had the right to ruin what it had created.

The farmer crossed again the fields that were once his dearest possession, and came to the edge of a dried-up creek. There he knelt to offer a prayer for mercy. He raised his eyes for a final glimpse of the sun, and his face relaxed into a victorious smile. . . . At least he himself, and not his enemy, was destroying his body.

There was a shot, and then silence. A moment of deathly stillness . . . and suddenly a soft patter was heard. . . . As it continued, it grew louder and made a steady pounding.

It was rain.

Ruth Wallace.

The Reason for the Rain

The sun peeped out behind a cloud
And tossed his golden head,
And rubbing eyes half full of sleep,
He blinked and slowly said,

"I've worked enough these past few days,
I think I'll let it rain."
So over his head he pulled a cloud
And went to sleep again.

Arctic Night

Across the frozen waste three grey-black shadows crept silently. Eagerly sniffing the air, they crawled upon the crusted snow toward their unsuspecting prey. Suddenly the object of their stalk, a huge buck caribou, lifted his antlered head and detected the approaching forms. He turned and fled. His cloven hoofs cut deeply into the snow that supported his pursuers. Slowly he struggled on, knee-deep in clinging snow.

Shrieking their weird cry, the wolves broke into a lope. In horseshoe formation they quickly overtook their prey. The caribou turned, at bay. The smallest of the trio, flushed with the inexperience of youth, rushed full at the cornered animal. The deer reared and struck with sharp-edged hoofs. The snow turned crimson.

With a throaty growl another grey form leaped for the deer's flank. As the caribou sank, the third wolf sprang to pierce the deer's jugular. The caribou kicked spasmodically. The two wolves tore at his side. Bright red streamers spread across the white snow.

New Day

Golden sunlight slanted down, covering the lake with a warm glow. Not a breath of air moved to disturb the calm reflections of the overhanging birches. Lazy turtles basked on half-sunken logs. Across every path and clearing stretched long shadows of the motionless trees.

A timid little cotton-tail hopped gaily across the road, pausing in the underbrush to flick his white powder-puff. In long, aerial sweeps a gold-finch swung over a field of unbending goldenrod. With a quick dart a drab peewee soundlessly pounced upon an unsuspecting insect. Down the center of the trail a furry little black and white catlike creature calmly paraded, confident of immunity from all attack.

Hesitatingly, the leaves began to quiver, as tiny ripples danced across the lake, distorting the sylvan reflections. To left and to right the goldenrod nodded plumed heads.

Suddenly the silence was broken. A bugle call rang through the shadowed glens.

The camp was awake.

Let Us Have Peace

If the gentlemen with their armor-plate plants in Pennsylvania and their powder factories in Delaware have their way, in a few years I will be sent out with a tin hat on my head to see if I can get myself converted into one hundred and forty pounds of fertilizer by the action of one-half ounce of lead. In more simple language, war is imminent. Public sentiment is at present opposed to armed conflict between nations, but when the propaganda presses start rolling and the slogans start to fly, the good old war spirit will leap up and the boys will go tramping off to die for their country.

When the recruiting drums start to roll and the "patriotic" dames give their pep talks, I for one hope to retain my sanity and keep my brains from getting mushed up with some Manchurian mud. The chances are that you, I, and the fellow reading over your shoulder will rush down the street after the band, just begging for a chance to see how cold a piece of steel feels in our anatomy. If this country gets itself into a war, those able-bodied men that don't volunteer will be drafted. The only chance our generation has to keep from getting the war-shock that the youth of 1917 suffered is to keep the United States out of war.

When the papers of the nation get their advances from the munition monarchs and start to inflame the country with a hatred for some foreign power, then is the time for us—this means you—to let the boys in Washington know that we don't like war, we won't fight their wars, and if they value their jobs they had better work like dogs to keep us out of war. It's too late to do this when the insulting notes have been sent and the commissary department is buying cardboard shoes and itchy shirts. The time for action has come when you hear the bird with the dead-fish expression on his face who's sitting next to you say, "Dees Japs are gettin' wise. I tink we oughter go over an' clean 'em up just da way dis guy in de 'News' says."

That time is coming soon. It may be tomorrow; it may be now. We must open our eyes. We must act! Unless, of course, we prefer a hunk of shrapnel in the region of the stomach.

Lincoln High School Athletic Association

An association of long and honorable standing in Lincoln High School is the Lincoln Athletic Association. It is deemed a great honor to be a member of this group. The student officers are elected each year by the student body. At the last election of officers those elected were Sam Tomassi, president; James Clancy, vice-president, and Patricia Ryan, secretary. The faculty members are: Mr. H. F. Benway, treasurer; Mr. Thomas H. Quigley and Mr. C. Fitzpatrick, advisers; and Mr. John J. Sloane, director.

This year has been an especially successful one for the organization, as the treasury has been filled by the proceeds from the Radio Show sponsored by the school under the direction of Mr. C. Fitzpatrick and Mr. Herreilers. The baseball tickets were sponsored by the members of this association as well as the regular L. A. A. tickets. These baseball tickets, in addition to being honored at most of the games, were good for dancing in the gym at 12:30. That is another activity which should be supported by the school, as the proceeds go to the L. A. A. treasury.

The L. A. A. is considered one of the most powerful organizations in this school. Boost the L. A. A. so it shall always maintain this reputation.

BASKET BALL....

Though seriously weakened by the graduation of some veterans, the basketball team, under the guidance of Coach Slane, managed to give every team they played a stiff fight.

Lincoln 28—Woodrow Wilson 24

Lincoln won a close tussle from Woodrow Wilson by the score of 28-24. After a bad start, which saw them behind by 13-7 at the end of the first half, Lincoln rallied; and, aided by the great offensive work of Al Shea and Jack Thompson, the Big Blue almost overtook Wilson at the end of the third quarter. The last quarter was the most exciting, as it seemed to be a question of whether Al Shea himself could outscore Woodrow Wilson or not. Shea got the better of the argument by scoring eight points himself, while Wilson was held to three points.

Lincoln 10—Union Hill 26

In a hard fought game Lincoln was downed by Union Hill on a 26-10 count. The first three quarters were featured by the close guarding of the teams, as is told by the 9-3 score at the end of the third quarter. However, a Union Hill rally in the final quarter, which gave them fourteen points, provided the margin of the defeat.

Lincoln 22—Memorial 24

Although a last period rush carried the Lincoln cagers to within two points of their opponents, Memorial managed to smother the attack and on to win, by the score of 24-22. The Blue and White made an effort to close the gap when the third period got under way, but the West New York boys resisted with enough force to keep their two point advantage.

Lincoln 16—Bayonne 34

Though Lincoln fought hard to avenge a previous defeat, her efforts were frustrated, and the great Bayonne quintet won by a 34-16 score. The Bayonne forwards established a lead in the first quarter which they held throughout the game. Schuessler's and Wines's fine defense work helped keep Bayonne's score from soaring to still greater heights than the final 34.

Lincoln 21—Union Hill 25

Union Hill defeated Lincoln in a close, hard-fought contest by the score of 25-21. Union Hill held the upper hand at the half by the score of 17-13, but the Slanemen came back to outscore their rivals, 8 to 6 in the third canto and bring the score to 23-21. Lincoln, however, too anxious to win, threw its passwork to the winds in the final quarter, taking wild shots at the basket. Shea and Thompson starred in this game for Lincoln.

Lincoln 26—Woodrow Wilson 36

Woodrow Wilson returned to early season form with a triumph over Lincoln, to the score of 36-26. Lincoln took a 7-5 lead in the opening period, but let down badly under a fast Wilson attack by which the Indians secured fifteen points in the second quarter. Both teams attained the same number of points in the last half. Shea and Schuessler scored high for Lincoln.

Lincoln 11—St. Michael's 20

Minus the sterling services of Bill Sinnott and Al Shea, Lincoln was easy prey for St. Michael's quintet. The score was 20-11. The St. Michael's five had a big first quarter, in which they gathered eleven points while Lincoln secured two. In the second quarter, in spite of this advantage, Lincoln rallied somewhat to hold St. Michael's to one point, leaving a score of 12-5 at the half.

Lincoln 13—Emerson 23

A strong rally in the second half enabled the Emerson High quintet to score a decisive 23-15 victory over Lincoln's cagers. The game was closely contested in the first two periods, the score at the time being 7-6; but a concerted drive by Emerson in the last half, when they scored 16 points to Lincoln's nine, gave the "Bluebells" the victory. Wines and Thompson were high scorers for Lincoln, with five markers each.

Lincoln 23—Dickinson 15

Coach Slane's charges snapped out of their losing streak by again downing the old-time Dickinson jinx, to the tune of 23-15. It was a close game all the way, although the play was not brilliant. Lincoln started off strongly by scoring two baskets and a foul before Dickinson scored at all. Nevertheless, Dickinson hung on tenaciously during the first half to make the score 14-13, with Lincoln leading at the intermission. While holding Dickinson to two points, the Slanemen scored eight points in the second half for a decisive win.

Lincoln 19—Memorial 36

The strong Memorial cagers sank Lincoln by the score of 36-19. Lincoln secured a 3-2 lead in the first quarter and stretched it to 9-7 at half time. The Memorial team came back strongly in the third quarter to gather 14 points, while Lincoln got 4; and again in the last period Memorial got 13 points while holding Lincoln to 6.

Lincoln 13—Demarest 27

Lincoln continued its losing streak in a game with Demarest. The score was 27-13. Demarest led by 14-6 at half time, continued its scoring in the third and fourth periods to outdistance the Blue and White cagers easily.

Lincoln 20—St. Peter's 17

After a close, hard-fought game the Lincoln five eked out a close win over a fighting St. Peter's five by the score of 20-17. By their victory they gained ample revenge for an earlier setback at the hands of the "Prep." The "Prep" team rallied strongly at the start of the second half, and began to pile up points. However, a well-knit Lincoln defense subdued the rally, and the game ended with Lincoln leading the way.

Lincoln 27—Lincoln Evening 30

Lincoln Evening defeated their day school rivals by the score of 30-27. The game was contested until a fourth quarter spurt sent the Owls into a decisive lead, which they didn't relinquish.

Lincoln 38—Henry Snyder 18

Henry Snyder was soundly trounced by a smoothly-working Lincoln five to the tune of 38-18. The game quickly resolved itself into the question of how many points Lincoln would score. Schuessler and Thompson were the sparkplugs which drove the highly geared Lincoln machine to victory.

Lincoln 20—Snyder 17

Snyder, determined to avenge the previous beating, played inspired ball and led Lincoln on a few occasions. The tide of fortune changed, however; and Lincoln, aided by the baskets of Wines and Schuessler, forged ahead and remained there till the end of the game.

BASEBALL

William Tatulli ..... Manager
Hugh McKenna ..... Captain
Mr. Charles F. Fitzpatrick..... Adviser
Mr. John Slane ..... Coach

TEAM

Pitchers: Whitbeck, Behrens, Calloway, Aschong, McDonald.
Catcher: McKenna, Kostereva.
Outfielders: Yengo, McDonough, D'Alessandro.
Infielders: Brown, Hoffman, Pierce, Campbell, McCabe.

Lincoln 0—Textile 9

The Lincoln nine opened the 1935 season in a disappointing fashion, when they were decisively beaten 9-0 by Textile High School of New York. The powerful Textile nine, behind the inspired pitching of Nicolas and Romera, had no trouble in hitting three Lincoln pitchers for a total of eight hits. Lincoln collected only three scattered hits; but as they came out at times when the bases were vacant, they went for nought.

Lincoln 11—Henry Snyder 2

Behind the effective pitching of Charlie Achong the Big Blue batters hit their stride and walloped the offering of "Lefty" Cocoa over the lot for eleven hits and a sum of eleven runs while Lincoln limited the Snyder batters to two hits, striking out 13. The victory restored the confidence of the team after a shaky first-game start.

Lincoln 6—Jefferson 2

The team copped its second victory by a 6-2 triumph over Jefferson in a game that was curtailed to five innings on account of rain. Behrens, the Lincoln moundsman, turned in a good job in limiting the powerful Jeffersonians to four hits and two runs, while his team-mates had a good day in pounding the offering of the rival pitcher for six hits. Three hits by Francis McDonough and a timely home run by Harry D'Allesandro led the way to victory.

Lincoln 7—St. Michael's 6

Although St. Michael's team put up a stiff battle, our club nosed them out by the score of 7-6. In the second inning hits by Heffernan and Brown, followed by Adamchuk's home run gave us a three-run lead. St. Michael's, however, in their half of the inning went ahead by one run as the Lincoln moundsman momentarily weakened. The Blue and White had another scoring spree in the sixth inning, when they put over three more runs on hits by Pierce, H. McKenna, and Campbell, and safe bunts by D'Alessandro and Heffernan. Again in the seventh Lincoln scored, making a total of seven runs. St. Michael's rallied in the ninth, boosting their total to six runs. Lincoln then fought hard, played fine defensive ball, and saved the day.

Lincoln 5—St. Peter's 2

The Slanemen continued their brilliant winning streak as they took the St. Peter's Prepsters into camp to the tune of 5-2. Peter's put up an unexpected fight to make the game interesting although Whitbeck, the "Lion" pitcher, had the Prepsters eating out of his hands, as he gave them only four scattered hits while whiffing seventeen batters. Our team gave him a lead of one run in the first, and continued by scoring another in the fifth. The Prep scored one tally in the sixth, but Lincoln reciprocated with a barrage of three runs in the seventh stanza. Peter's fought back and scored a run in the ninth, but poor base-running nipped their rally in the bud.

Lincoln 7—Union Hill 6

Our boys continued their brilliant play when they knocked off a previously unbeaten Union Hill nine by the score of 7-6. Lincoln started off with a bang by bunching three hits and a walk, to score four runs in the first inning, but Union Hill nullified this advantage by scoring three counters in their half of the first inning and another run in the second. In the third inning Lincoln put over three hits for two more runs. Union tied the score on a homer by Zaycek, and three singles. In the eighth inning Hugh McKenna singled, and Harry D'Alessandro supplied the victory punch by driving McKenna around. Behrens, the third Lincoln pitcher, succeeded in holding Union Hill for the rest of the game.

Lincoln 5—Memorial 4

Lincoln pulled another close one out of the fire as they defeated Memorial by the score of 5-4. The game was intensely interesting from the first pitch to the last out. Memorial was leading most of the game, scoring a run in the fourth and three more in the seventh. Lincoln, meanwhile, scored a run in the second inning, and then lost their batting potency, until the seventh when they scored on hits by Brown, McDonough, and Pierce. The eighth inning marked the turning point of the game. Heffernan walked and was sacrificed and took third on a wild pitch. Then he stole home to tie the score at 4-4. The winning tally was provided by two walks and an error. As a result of this victory, Lincoln took the lead in the race for the county championship.

Lincoln 14—Emerson 12

Continuing their streak of winning, our boys submerged the Emerson tossers under a wave of 14 runs to 12 for their opponents. The game was featured by heavy hitting on the part of both nines, but Lincoln's late scoring punch manifested itself in the eighth inning when Johnny Yengo singled Pierce and McKenna across the plate with the winning tallies.

Lincoln 8—Bayonne 11

Bayonne High School's baseballers ended the long winning streak of Johnny Slane's boys as they downed Lincoln by an 11-8 score. The game was marred by costly errors by Lincoln's infielders, on which Bayonne built up a lead which was not overcome.

Lincoln 9—St. Peter's 7

Roused by this defeat, Lincoln took the measure of a threatening St. Peter's aggregation by a count of 9-7. Chet Campbell's single in the ninth inning scored two runs to overcome a 7-6 St. Peter's edge.

This victory gave our team an average of eight wins in ten starts, to place them near the top of the county race.

It was with much regret that the members of the 12A class learned of Miss Koch's resignation, but they warmly welcomed Miss Foss who took her place as adviser.

During the latter part of February, the class was organized, and the officers were elected.

As one of our activities, members of the class presented a Memorial Day Play, "The Boy in Blue."

Our class president, Thomas Jaeger, introduced a new idea—that of having a 12A group picture in "The Quill."

To the graduating class of June, 1935, we extend our sincerest wishes for a successful and happy future.

The Vocal Class

Mary Felz ..... President
Anna Braxton ..... Secretary
Gertrude Gillen ..... Treasurer

The Vocal Class of Lincoln has been organized since the beginning of Lincoln High School. Mr. Schwartz, the director, has worked hard and faithfully to make the Vocal Class what it is today.

The Glee Club and the Vocal Class combined constitute the Choir.

The meetings are held once every week. New members are welcomed heartily. The sole aim of Mr. Schwartz is to give the members of the choir an opportunity to learn some of the numerous sacred compositions of great composers.

We extend our heartiest congratulations to our members who are leaving this term. They are: Helen Lightfoot, Henrietta Pulle, Gertrude Gillen, and Anna Braxton.

The Camera Club

Mary Poppe ..... President
Neil Luck ..... Vice-President
Sarah Rountree ..... Secretary
Jeanne McConagly ..... Treasurer
Mrs. Skiffington ..... Adviser

The Camera Club, the oldest club in Lincoln and originally organized by Mr. Medsger, is now under the able direction of Mrs. Skiffington.

The meetings this term have been especially interesting. Frequently, the members have developed their own pictures in the dark room of our school, and at present are competing for two prizes which will be awarded —one for the best action picture, and the other for the best nature picture. A nature hike has been planned for June 1st. In the near future, the club expects to exhibit the work of its members.

To the seniors of the club, and to the entire class of June, 1935, the members of the Camera Club extend their most sincere wishes for success in the future.

The Cashier's Club

Stella Serafin ..... President
Marion Copeland ..... Vice-President
Hazel Davies ..... Secretary
Mr. Benway ..... Adviser

School banking has become a matter of course to many of our students, and in many instances it is carried on with seldom a thought as to the true meaning and ultimate possibilities of the project. It is, then, altogether proper that we suggest some thoughts regarding this movement which is growing constantly.

The purpose of the club is to make habitual those practices of thrift without which most people are unworthy citizens, unhappy and unable to profit by numerous opportunities. We strongly believe in saving since it develops forethought and removes one of the greatest causes of worry.

Those who participate in this great organization, and those who reap the most good, are those who save regularly and for a particular purpose.

We, the members of the Cashier's Club, extend to the Senior Class our heartiest wishes for a future of the greatest happiness and success.

Il Circolo Lincolniano

Joseph Decresce ..... President
Mary Attanasio ..... Vice-President
Angelina Simeone ..... Secretary
Mary Magaldi ..... Treasurer
Dorothy Botti ..... Publicity Manager
Miss Maria Iuculano ..... Adviser

The Italian Club, under the guidance of Miss Iuculano, has been enjoying a very successful season. At each meeting, entertainment is presented by the social and literary committee. Il Circolo is living up to its purpose, which is to have the Italian students become better acquainted with the country whose language they study.

On June 7th, Il Circolo gave its third annual presentation, a three-act comedy in Italian entitled, "Le Nemica," or in English, "The Enemy." The proceeds were used for a fund for high average students interested in Italian.

To the class of June, 1935, the club extends its best wishes for success in the future.

The Citamard Guild

Janet Landrine ..... President
Raymond Shallis ..... Vice-President
Helen Fitzgibbons ..... Secretary
Patricia Ryan ..... Treasurer
Miss Mary Sutton ..... Adviser

Under the capable supervision of Miss Sutton, the Citamard Guild has successfully completed its fifth term. Comparatively a new organization, it has taken its place as one of the most active organizations in Lincoln.

This term the entertainment for club meetings has been directly in the hands of the students. Leaders have selected, cast, directed, and presented in the auditorium one act plays for entertainment during club meetings. The leaders were Elaine Davies, James McDonald, Beatrice Kramer, Sylvia Hahn, Herbert Geist, Sam Newman, and Helene Jaffin. The plays they presented were: "Rosalind," "Two Gentlemen On a Bench," "Twice is Too Much," "The Flattering Word," "Even Evelyn," "The Pot Boiler," and "Matter of Choice."

To the Class of June, 1935, we express our most sincere wishes for future success and happiness.

Commercial Club

Under the excellent supervision of Mrs. Bagotko, the Commercial Club has completed its second successful year.

The club has constantly aimed to foster a spirit of good fellowship among the commercial students; to create, stimulate, and promote interest in commercial work; and to obtain a general idea of what is required of high school students by the business world.

This semester, "Hooks and Crooks," a one act play, was presented before the entire school organization, the male roles being portrayed by girls in male attire. It was a huge success.

To the members of the Class of June, 1935, we extend our heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

Deutscher Verein

Harold Wohlrab ..... President
Ann Becker ..... Vice-President
Sylvia Margulies ..... Secretary
Veronica Boylan ..... Treasurer
Miss Bauman ..... Adviser

Under the splendid supervision of Miss Bauman, the Deutscher Verein has completed another entertaining term. The purpose of this club is to cultivate a knowledge among Lincoln students of the language, customs and literature of the German people. One must have completed a year and a half study of German to become a member. At the meetings, German personalities, past and present, are discussed by members and guest speakers. Entertainment also consists of cross word puzzles and card games.

To the Class of June, 1935, we extend our heartiest congratulations and sincerest wishes for a successful future.

Auf Wiedersehen!

P. M. Citamard Guild

Eugene Winokur ..... President
Shirley Richard ..... Vice-President
Frank Clare ..... Secretary
Maxwell Rasman ..... Treasurer
Miss Dunbrack ..... Adviser

Under the able guidance of Miss Dunbrack, the P. M. Citamard Guild has successfully completed another term. The purpose of the organization is to promote an active interest in dramatics.

The club has been very active during the past season, and the meetings most entertaining. It was the pleasure of the Guild to present an entertainment, "Scenes from the Life of Lincoln," before the school, early last February. During the making of the production, we tried our hand at scenic designing and were amazed by the good results. Special plans are being made for another entertainment to be presented before the student body before the term expires.

To the class of June, 1935, we extend our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for future success.

"El Circulo Cervantes"

Walter Gall ..... President
Mildred Vogel ..... Vice-President
John Hermans ..... Secretary
Adele Smith ..... Treasurer
Miss Helen V. Bossidy..... Adviser

The purpose of "El Circulo Cervantes," the afternoon Spanish Club, is to promote and develop interest in Spanish and Latin-American people and culture. The following committees were formed to carry out this purpose: Literature, Dramatics, Current Events, Publicity, and Entertainment.

The Literature committee presented a reading of "The Cradle Song" by Martinez-Sierra.

The Dramatic committee gave a short play on "El Cid," Spain's national hero.

Those interested in current events supplied the club with Spanish newspapers and magazines, while interesting Spanish games afforded others entertainment.

A trip to the Spanish Museum and Theatre in New York completed the activities of the year.

P. M. French Club

Selma Levy ..... President
Margaret McCormick ..... Vice-President
Mary Sue Waggener ..... Secretary
Marie King ..... Treasurer
Miss Canac ..... Adviser

The P. M. French Club, under the able supervision of Miss Canac, has completed another successful term.

The purpose of our club is to instill in Lincoln students a deep interest in the study of the French language and people.

The club meets every second Monday from 5:30 to 6:00 P. M., and during the past term French plays have been presented and French songs sung. Miss Canac, a native born Frenchwoman, has explained to us different French customs by means of pictures.

To the class of June, 1935, "Le Cercle Francais" extends its heartiest congratulations and sincerest wishes for success in the future.

Literary Club

Inga Jorgenson ..... President
Mary Kravetz ..... Vice-President
Miriam Schnitzer ..... Secretary
Sylvia Hahn ..... Treasurer
Miss Everett ..... Adviser

Under the able guidance of its adviser, Miss Everett, the Literary Club has completed another successful term.

The meetings this term have been devoted to reviews of modern books, and biographies of their authors.

An interesting and profitable project has been under way. The members have been blooming into authors, and three plays have been written. The dramas were based on short stories by celebrated authors.

In the early part of the term the club went to see the play, "The Grand Canal." The excursion was enjoyed so much that we hope to make a similar one again.

The Literary Club bids the graduating class farewell with sincere wishes for happiness and success.

Girls' Gym Leaders' Club

The Girls' Gym Leaders' Club, which is under the guidance of Miss Florence Ware, is decidedly different from any other organization in Lincoln High School. We have no officers, and our meetings are held during class period.

The purpose of the organization is to promote general activities, and to provide for each girl her share of proper individual attention from a capable instructor. Each leader wears the letter "L" on her costume in order to distinguish her from the other girls of the class. It is her duty to take charge of a certain group of girls and to direct their work. In order to do this successfully she must show initiative and natural ability in athletics.

To the members of the class of June, 1935, we extend our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for future success and happiness.

The Lincoln Leader

Richard Morrison.....Mechanical Manager
Robert A. Danielson.....Make-up Manager
Mr. Hubert Wright.....Adviser

The Lincoln Leader is published weekly by the Lincoln High School Journalists' Association, organized October 1, 1934. The association includes the eighty-four members of the classes in journalism, each of whom is a reporter for the Leader. The main enterprise of the association has been the publication of the school's newspaper, a mimeographed sheet of five pages. The circulation is approximately 800 copies.

Economics Club

Mayera Singer ..... President
Harold Wickholm ..... Vice-President
Gertrude Gillen ..... Secretary
Frederick Olsen ..... Treasurer
Miss Jackson ..... Adviser

Under the able guidance of Miss Jackson, the Economics Club has been enjoying a most successful semester.

The club meets every Friday at 1:00 P. M. for the purpose of discussing current topics such as: Government Ownership and Control of Public Utilities, the Relief Situation, and Economic Conditions in Russia. At one meeting, Mr. Wright gave an interesting talk concerning ethics in business.

Recently an instructive tour of the Seventh Precinct Police Station was made.

Plans are under way for a trip to the Times Building and the Daily News Building.

We offer the class of June, 1935, our sincerest congratulations and best wishes for a bright future.

Lincolnian Artists

Mayera Singer ..... President
Sam Newman ..... Vice-President
John Blellock ..... Secretary
Arthur Lincks ..... Treasurer
Miss De Marco ..... Adviser

Under the able guidance of Miss De Marco, art teacher, and Miss Titlow, art supervisor, the newly formed art club began its first semester.

Visits to exhibitions and the like form one-half of the club's activities. The other half is comprised of illustrated lectures and different phases of art given by the members of the organization and prominent people in art circles.

To the Senior Class of June, 1935, the Lincoln Artists extend their best wishes for success in the future.

The Aeronautical Club

Raymond Martin ..... President
Daniel Evers ..... Vice-President
Benjamin Gandel ..... Sergeant-at-Arms
Mr. Wehrlen ..... Adviser

At the personal invitation of Lieutenant-Colonel Robert Vaughn, second ranking war ace, a group of students visited the Casey Jones School of Aeronautics in Newark, N. J. This was the beginning of the Aeronautical Club. Since then numerous plane-model contests have been held and have proved highly successful. At present, plans are under way for the construction of a large model of a four-motor seaplane.

In addition to model-building, club meetings have been taken up with flight instruction and a few aerodynamic principles which determine safe flying.

Shorthand Club

Rita Sullivan ..... President
Evelyn Griffin ..... Vice-President
Marguerite Brady ..... Secretary
Jane Leonard ..... Treasurer
Miss V. Riesenberg..... Adviser

This club meets once a week for the purpose of studying shorthand and improving our proficiency in its technique. After the regular procedure of the day is completed, the remaining time is spent very profitably. Interesting articles are dictated and then a discussion as to subject matter follows. Short business plays are read and other allied commercial interests are taken up. Plans are also made for outside activities of a cultural background, such as attending the theatre and concerts. On June 17th, the club will entertain the school with a two-act play entitled "Diogenes Looking for a Stenographer."

To the members of our club who are graduating and to their class of June, 1935, we extend our best wishes.
